

Metropolitan Transportation Plan (MTP)

The Metropolitan Transportation Plan (MTP) is the Albuquerque Area's long range transportation plan. It includes projections and forecasts of what Albuquerque's metropolitan area will look like 20 years from now in terms of population, employment, number of vehicles on roadways, etc. All regionally significant improvements to the transportation system must be included in the MTP. What roads need to be built or improved; what transit, bicycle, and pedestrian facilities need to be developed or improved; and how all these different projects and modes of transportation will work together are all questions the MTP intends to answer.

Current MTP

The current adopted MTP is the 2030 MTP. Read more...

2035 MTP

The effective date for the 2035 MTP must be no later than June 30, 2011. In order to make that deadline, the Metropolitan Transportation Board must approve it no later than April, 2011. Work on the 2035 MTP is to be largely completed by November, 2010, in order to leave sufficient time to develop the 2012-2017 Transportation Improvement Program (more on that below), which will be adopted at the same time.

In the meantime, we want to hear from you and your friends and neighbors about what you think the transportation system needs to function between now and 2035. We will share your comments with the elected officials who comprise the Metropolitan Transportation Board as well as with the rest of the public who visit the 2035 MTP website.

Email us your comments at MTPComments@mrcog-nm.gov.

The Mid-Region MPO is actively seeking comments on transportation concerns for the 2035 MTP. Meetings where we have discussed the MTP are listed below.
